

April 8, 1965

Dr. Marc G. Raskin,
Co-Director
Institute for Policy Studies
1900 Florida Avenue, N.W.
Washington D.C. 20009

Dear Dr. Raskin:

Matt Meselson mentioned your interest in some of my remarks about Euphenics and as I do not travel very extensively I may not have the opportunity to "discuss certain implications of what I say" in Washington very soon. However, I thought I would send you some additional material that may interest you on this question. I am really very puzzled about the best route on which to develop my ideas on these matters somewhat more sharply and extensively and have been wondering, for example, if they did not deserve the same kind of critical attention which is now given in political columns in newspapers and news magazines. Let me then parry your suggestion and ask whether you may not be in this area at some time when it might be convenient for us to get together here.

Sincerely,

Joshua Lederberg
Professor of Genetics

JL:lj
Enc.

1166 #106
#110

The Next Move
The Utility of Anticipation